It compliments HACR's suite of professional development programs by offering the means for Hispanic mid-level managers to acquire the necessary skills and professional development to move into the ranks of corporate executives," said HACR President and CEO Cid D. Wilson. "We hope this is the beginning of a successful program aimed at helping us achieve our mission to advance the inclusion of Hispanics in Corporate America."

Running concurrently with the HACR LPP, the HACR Research Institute will present its latest research initiative, which focuses on Hispanics in STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics). This initiative was created to better understand the barriers that hinder the professional progression of Hispanics in STEM fields.

The HACR STEM Initiative will feature business sessions that provide Hispanics in STEM, corporate leaders, and business experts the opportunity to understand the barriers that limit Hispanic inclusion and the ways in which some companies have tried to overcome these barriers to improve diversity and Hispanic inclusion in STEM fields.

The STEM business sessions include panels focused on the following topics:

- Ιδεντιψινγ Οππορτυνιτιεσ ιν ΣΤΕΜ Εδυχατιον
