

NPRChamber & BRG Launch Cybersecurity Risk Management Study

Technology 2017-03-01 11:40:48

Emeryville, CA / Washington, DC – Leading strategic advisory and expert consulting firm Berkeley Research Group (BRG) announced today its partnership with the National Puerto Rican Chamber of Commerce (NPRChamber), and other international and national chambers of commerce, to launch a Cybersecurity Risk Management Study.

As part of its continuing efforts to encourage participation in the growing cybersecurity industry as a means for promoting economic development, the NPRChamber has partnered with BRG to launch a series of studies to underscore the importance of the industry, as well as better understand the needs of businesses and organizations across all sectors.

The study follows the 2016 Cybersecurity Preparedness Benchmarking Study and will provide participants an understanding of how organizations manage cyber-security risks, including systems, assets, data, and capabilities. The study will gauge leadership sentiment toward cyber security, as well as elements of essential protection and incident response planning. The initiative will also analyze cyber-budget priorities and program oversight.

The CS Risk Management study will be conducted in English and Spanish. Completing the questionnaire should take approximately 20 minutes. Participant data will be anonymized; BRG professionals may schedule follow-up interviews and knowledge-sharing sessions with self-identified participants to clarify response(s). Results of the study will be published on April 3.
